

A Note from the Chairman – 2019

What a privilege it is to be considered a supporter of an agency responsible for 65 years of positive community impact. As we strategically navigate how to best support the ever-changing landscape of our five-county non-profit network, one non-negotiable constantly resonates – community connectivity. Our goal at the Greater Valdosta United Way is to be the communal hub for all resources associated with human services support. Activating healthy agency partner relationships while emphasizing community awareness is our focus initiative for 2019.

The Greater Valdosta United Way is currently experiencing a season of opportunity. The agency's sixty-five-year history covers a great deal of success across multiple generations. As chairman, it's been most worthwhile engaging with United Way supporters associated with these different eras. The common denominator I've found between the agency's most successful years is a relentless, collective energy among our community.

Your United Way is strengthening. Realized improvements across leadership, governance, and visibility are beginning to create the next new wave. We look forward to a reformulated campaign approach aimed to appeal to the past, current, or potential Greater Valdosta United Way supporter of any generation.

My invitation is for you to come by the office and connect with us, identify an evocative area of impact, and begin contributing to the betterment of our community.

Respectfully,

Jonathan Miller
